

Summary of Today's News

North Korea test-fires new weapon with 'powerful warhead'

North Korea has test-fired a new tactical guided weapon - the first launch since a summit with the US ended without an agreement in Vietnam in February.

North Korea has test-fired a new tactical guided weapon - the first launch since a summit with the US ended without an agreement in Vietnam in February. The latest announcement came after reports of new activity at a site where the North was believed to build long-range missiles.

Mya-Lecia Naylor: Children's TV star dies aged 16

Actress Mya-Lecia Naylor, who starred in CBBC's Millie Inbetween and Almost Never, has died aged 16.

A statement posted to the CBBC website said: "We are so sorry to have to tell you that Mya-Lecia, who you will know from Millie Inbetween and Almost Never has, very sadly, died. On Instagram she wrote: "So shocked and sad to hear about lovely Mya-Lecia Naylor.

Bradley Welsh: Trainspotting 2 star 'shot dead' in Edinburgh

Trainspotting 2 star Bradley Welsh has been shot dead in Scotland, according to reports.

Police Scotland said: "His death is being treated as suspicious and inquiries are continuing. "Goodbye my amazing and beautiful friend," the writer tweeted. RIP Brad." Scottish actor Tam Dean Burn, who has played a range of roles on stage and screen, including in detective series Taggart, described Welsh as a "working class hero who did so much for the real grassroots Edinburgh".

Madeira: 29 dead as tourist coach overturns on Portuguese island

At least 29 people were killed after a tour bus carrying German tourists crashed on the Portuguese island of Madeira.

At least 29 people were killed after a tour bus carrying German tourists crashed on the Portuguese island of Madeira. Local MP Roberto Almada said the area is known as an "accident black-spot".

Extinction Rebellion: Three charged as climate protests launch new 'swarm'

Three people have been charged over this week's climate change protests in London, as demonstrators target a new bridge in the city.

Three people have been charged over this week's climate change protests in London, as demonstrators target a new bridge in the city. Motorists trying to cross Vauxhall Bridge during the Thursday morning rush hour were stopped by a line of demonstrators with a banner reading "life or death".

Galaxy Fold: Samsung smartphones 'break' after just two days, reviewers claim

Examples of Samsung's new foldable smartphone have broken after just two days, according to reviewers.

The screen on my Galaxy Fold review unit is completely broken and unusable just two days in. But Bloomberg's Mark Gurman tweeted that the "screen on my Galaxy Fold review unit is completely broken and unusable just two days in". It's broken." CNBC's Steve Kovach tweeted a video of his screen flickering, writing: "After one day of use..." Two journalists said they had removed a thin, protective layer from the screens, thinking it was meant to be removed when it was actually supposed to stay on.

Frustrated, confused: What Leave voters plan to do in the EU elections

The Kentish seaport of Ramsgate played an unwanted cameo role in the unfolding saga of Brexit.

Today, Ramsgate has a small coastal fishing fleet, dwarfed by the smart new craft of the offshore wind farm. Nigel Farage is a well-known local personality and is an outgoing member of the European parliament for the South East England region.

Now Mr Farage has broken with UKIP and is fielding candidates against it for his new Brexit Party. That certainly was the view of Steve Barrett, a local fisherman who sailed in the 2016 Leave flotilla up the River Thames to parliament, which clashed with Bob Geldof's Remain protest ship.

The seafront fish and chip shop has been frequented by both Mr Farage and the local Tory MP Craig MacKinlay. People do not understand why we are having these elections, and those drinking in the pub at least were tempted by the smaller Brexit parties.

The Brexit Party and Mr Farage are making the running in the conversations in what should be a UKIP heartland.

British diver Josh Bratchley who saved Thailand boys is rescued from flooded cave

A British diver who helped save 12 schoolboys trapped in a cave in Thailand has himself been rescued from a flooded tunnel in the US after more than a day underground.

A British diver who helped save 12 schoolboys trapped in a cave in Thailand has himself been rescued from a flooded tunnel in the US after more than a day underground. Edd Sorenson, a cave specialist for the Chattanooga Hamilton County Rescue Service who rescued the Briton, said when he found the diver, he was waiting "as calm as could be" in an air pocket.

Who are you?' I said 'I'm Edd Sorenson', and he said 'I should have known.

New North Korea test is warning to get talks restarted

Talks between North Korea and the US have ground to a halt of late.

Recently, there has been concern that Pyongyang might restart weapons testing - North Korea hadn't launched a missile since November 2017. Mr Trump wants to tell America he's secured something historic against all the odds.