

Summary of Today's News

'Do you know this man?' First images of double rape and abduction suspect

Police have released two images of the man they are seeking over the abduction and rape of two women.

Image issued of suspect sought following the abduction and rape of two women in #Chingford #Edgware - do you know this man? "It is vitally important we catch this man, and while stranger attacks of this nature are thankfully rare, we would urge people to remain vigilant." On Saturday police released an image of the car used in the attacks: a silver or grey Ford S-Max people carrier, with false registration plates.

Sri Lanka attack mastermind's family 'blow themselves up' in raids

Police have raided the headquarters of the banned group NTJ as sources said the father and brothers of the suspected mastermind of the Easter bombings were killed on Friday.

The three dead men were in a video circulating for some time on social media in which they urged their followers to kill all non believers, police sources said. Security forces were said to have recovered explosives, detonators, "suicide kits", military uniforms and IS group flags during the raids.

Bomb-making materials, dozens of sticks of gelignite, thousands of ball bearings and IS banners and uniforms were found in a separate house in the same area, the military said. "This is a time questions such as, does God truly love us, does He have compassion towards us, can arise in human hearts." Sri Lanka's president and prime minister attended the mass in a show of attempted unity after a week in which the country's political fractures have been exposed.

Massive fire at coal depot causing major disruption to Heathrow trains

A massive fire at an old coal depot in west London is causing major disruption to trains going to and from Heathrow Airport.

Heathrow Express says no trains are coming in or out of Paddington Station as up to 40 firefighters and six appliances tackle the blaze.

Leeds United let Aston Villa score after controversial goal

Aston Villa players were allowed to walk the ball into the net after a controversial Leeds United opener as the sides played out a bizarre 1-1 draw in the Sky Bet Championship.

The result ended Leeds's hopes of automatic promotion but confirmed their spot in the play-offs - where they could face Aston Villa again.

California synagogue shooting: Injured rabbi came face-to-face with gunman

A rabbi injured in a deadly shooting at a synagogue in California has told how he came face-to-face with the gunman.

My fingers got blown away." During the shooting at the Chabad of Poway synagogue, 60-year-old Lori Kaye died after throwing herself in front of the rabbi.

Ms Jacobs wrote the attacker "shot and killed Lori Kaye who took the bullets for the rabbi. One witness, who saw Mr Peretz rescue children at the synagogue, told Fox 5 San Diego: "He grabbed all the kids in his hands and was just running towards the exit (when) he saw another kid over there.

He allegedly wrote on an online message board that he planned to livestream his attack in San Diego, which took place exactly six months after shootings at a synagogue in Pittsburgh where 11 people died.

'Move to high ground!': Devastating floods could affect hundreds of thousands in Mozambique

People are being told to move to higher ground as flooding rages in northern Mozambique, which has been battered by Cyclone Kenneth over the last three days.

They shouted "Help us, we are losing everything" as the rushing waters flooded their homes. Forecasters say as much as nine inches - about a quarter of the average annual rainfall - could fall over the next few days and up to four inches are forecast in the next 24 hours, according to Mozambique's meteorological institute.

Cyprus serial killer: Suitcase with woman's remains inside removed from toxic lake

A suitcase containing the body of a woman has been removed from a highly toxic lake by police searching for victims of a suspected serial killer in Cyprus.

The alleged murderer, named locally as Nicos Metaxas, a Greek Cypriot army officer, claims he has killed five women and two young girls and says he put some of the victims' bodies in suitcases. Opposition AKEL politician Irene Charalambides said: "These women came here to earn a living, to help their families.

New warning for opioid painkillers

Opioid painkillers will have to carry prominent warnings about the risk of addiction, the health secretary has announced.

Mr Hancock said: "I have been incredibly concerned by the recent increase in people addicted to opioid drugs. That same year, the US declared the opioid crisis a national emergency, estimating that 11.4 million people were misusing prescription painkillers.

Flights diverted from Gatwick after 'drone sighting'

A possible drone sighting at Gatwick Airport forced the diversion of three flights on Sunday.

Around 140,000 passengers' journeys were disrupted and the army had to be called in with anti-drone equipment, which remained at the airport until last month. Meanwhile, there was also some disruption at Heathrow due to a fire at an old coal depot in West Drayton, three miles north of the airport.

Royal baby: Prince Harry at London Marathon finish line so no child for Meghan yet!

Prince Harry is at the London Marathon finish line to hand out winners' medals, despite rumours that his wife may be about to give birth.

Last year, the duchess revealed she was due to give birth towards the end of April and start of May, suggesting we could be days away from hearing the news of the pitter-patter of new royal feet - but this announcement hints the birth is not expected imminently.