

Summary of Today's News

Police release new images of Lyra McKee murder suspect

Police in Northern Ireland have released new images of the man they believe murdered journalist Lyra McKee.

Police believe the gunman is one of two suspects who is seen walking behind him. A 57-year-old woman was arrested on Tuesday in connection with the murder of Ms McKee. It came after the so-called New IRA said it was behind the journalist's death on 18 April. The first book, The Lost Boys, was due for release next year.

Huawei leak inquiry 'could become criminal probe'

A formal Whitehall inquiry launched into the Huawei leak could become a criminal investigation, Sky News understands.

What ministers who were there are saying Sky News political editor Beth Rigby has been told the inquiry could turn into a criminal investigation involving the police. "It's not about the substance of what was apparently leaked - it's not earth shattering information - but it is important that we protect the principle that nothing that goes on in National Security Council meetings must ever be repeated outside the room." Other members of the Five Eyes intelligence-sharing group, which includes the US, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, have already raised concerns.

Sri Lanka attacks: President says police are pursuing 140 suspects with links to IS

Sri Lankan police are searching for 140 suspects thought to have links with the Islamic State terror group after the Easter Sunday bombings, the country's president has said.

Sky's Asia correspondent Tom Cheshire, who is in the capital Colombo, said: "That's hardly reassuring, the idea that maybe in the next few days they will have things under control." Sri Lanka's health ministry drastically revised down its estimated death toll down from 359 late on Thursday. Sri Lankan authorities have said the suspected leader of the group they believe carried out the attacks died in one of the nine bombings. The company said in a statement: "Following the change in advice by the Foreign Office advising against all but essential travel to Sri Lanka, TUI UK has made the decision to fly all customers currently on holiday back to the UK on Saturday 27th April and have cancelled all excursions on Friday 26th April."

Emiliano Sala's father dies three months after footballer's fatal plane crash

The father of Emiliano Sala has died three months after the Premier League footballer was killed in a plane crash.

Horacio Sala described his anguish after the wreckage was discovered, telling Argentinian television: "I cannot believe it. Following the player's death, Cardiff City and Nantes are locked in a legal battle over his £15m transfer fee after the Premier League club refused to pay the first £5m instalment.

Vauxhall recalls Zafira models for third time over new fire risk

British carmaker Vauxhall is recalling 235,000 Zafira people carriers for a third time over new fears the vehicles could catch fire.

Vauxhall said the latest recall affects cars built between 2005 and 2014 which do not have electronic climate control. "So we are overseeing a further precautionary recall of the Zafira B and will monitor progress to ensure Vauxhall notifies all registered owners in writing as soon as possible." It comes after a damning report in 2017 by the Commons Transport Select Committee accusing Vauxhall of showing a "reckless disregard for safety" by not stopping motorists driving Zafira

B vehicles it knew were a fire risk.

Extinction Rebellion: Possible Banksy artwork appears as climate change protests close

Suspected Banksy artwork has emerged in central London after the closing ceremony of the Extinction Rebellion protests.

Extinction Rebellion supporter Calvin Benson, 48, said the artwork "represents the will of the people that were here and the people of the nation". Organisers said demonstrators were targeting the financial sector on the last day of protests "to demand they tell the truth about the devastating impact the industry has on our planet".

Eco-protesters want urgent action to halt climate change and to stop the decline in biodiversity, and have called on the government to reduce UK carbon emissions to net zero by 2025.

Fake German heiress Anna Sorokin convicted of fraud after bankrolling lavish lifestyle

A fake German heiress has been convicted of multiple fraud charges after conning banks, hotels and friends to fund an implausibly lavish New York lifestyle.

Prosecutors portrayed Sorokin as a profligate con artist, while her lawyer tried to convince the jury she was an aspiring businesswoman in awe of New York's extravagance. He said: "As proven at trial, Anna Sorokin committed real white-collar felonies over the course of her lengthy masquerade".

Game Of Thrones fans aren't happy with this Daenerys Targaryen waxwork

She is Daenerys Targaryen, Mother of Dragons, a queen who could soon claim the Iron Throne.

It looks more like David Beckham than @emiliaclarke "Wow, Winter's really taken its toll," said one commenter on the venue's Instagram post, referencing one of the series' most famous lines: "Winter is coming." "How do you f this up with all the technology there is," said another user. How many times can Beyonce statues get it wrong? Clarke herself has yet to comment on her own figure, but let's hope Daenerys sees the funny side.

Taylor Swift unveils new single ME! - and says goodbye to 'snake' era

First there was country Taylor Swift, then pop Taylor Swift, then biggest-star-in-the-world Taylor Swift, then vengeful, don't-mess-with Taylor Swift - who told us in no uncertain terms that the old Taylor Swift was dead.

The video contains many references to her previous works and images - including a snake, a nod to her famous feud with Kim Kardashian and Kanye West.

The song is an upbeat earworm of a pop track, Swift's first since her singles from 2017 album Reputation, and features Brendon Urie of Panic! "You know, I think that with a pop song we have the ability to get a melody stuck in people's heads and I just want it to be one that makes people feel better about themselves, not worse." Swift also thanked her fans for "caring about the music that I make" and said hints she had dropped in the build-up to the release made the experience "more fun" because to "create music and music videos knowing (fans) will care about little Easter eggs or clues or hints - you have no idea how much fun that is".

Autogenerated by Harris Vince on 2019-04-26 in 3.87s. Reading this saved you 21:08min.